Happy Old England.
She Has Faithful Sons.
They Get and Keep.
Working Always for Her.
By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1918.
How much money will Germany be able to pay is another after-the-war question.

England claims forty billions—forty times the amount that the war cost her.

France shows that her claim for the cost of the war, plus the billion that Blumhagen took in 1917, with compound interest, runs up to the neighborhood of sixty billions.

Italy, of course, will want damages running into billions, and has her claim the same as France and England.

Germany will face a bill for at least one hundred and fifty billion dollars' damages from the various allies, plus colonies and territories.

The question is, can Germany pay the amount? Can it be arranged to control Germany sufficiently and at the same time give her economic independence and growth enough to pay such a sum?

Next to the United States, Great Britain was supposed to be the wealthiest nation. But after Great Britain had spent thirty billions on war she began borrowing of us, and did the other allies.

Germany presumably spent forty billions before she collapsed. Will she be able, under coercion, to produce one hundred and fifty billions more? If not, what will happen after the allies take charge of revenue, customs, receipts of private forms? To what extent will it interfere with German wealth production?

One result might be the creation of a great Bolshevik eastern Europe, made up of Russia, Germany, Austria, Hungary and Turkey, given over to anarchy, murder, hopeless and apparently endless strife, with eastern Europe controlling the sea, weapons and money, keeping guard against a western eruption of eastern Bolshevikism, as armed guards in the insane asylum keep back the violent patients.

With the war ended there will be two powerful nations in the world, Great Britain and the United States.

The English are thoroughly determined that the great power shall be Great Britain, and they announce frankly through the mouths of their officials that they intend to rule the ocean in the future as in the past, of the sea as J. F. Garvin, the distinguished British journalist, did yesterday, "what is grievously unjust the freedom of the sea."

If it is all right—and it is—for Englishmen to say that they want England to be the bigger of the two greatest Powers coming out of the war, why is it not right for an American, if he happens to be all American, to say that he would prefer to have the United States the great power?

We read Mr. Garvin's extremely kind statement, "it never entered our minds to interrupt America's free dealings in any way with the rest of the world." And we are grateful, as we should be, for that kind concession, but we feel there is something else we might ask.

It is impossible to read the state-ments of Englishmen today without seeing and admiring the strong national spirit that has made England what she is.

You read today Northcliffe, Churchill, Garvin and others.

You look at the map, see a certain flag flying on a little group of islands off the west coast of Europe. Then you find that same flag flying over Canada, north of us; Alaska and part of South America, south of us; over all of Australia and New Zealand, India, Egypt, South Africa, and islands in the Mediterranean. And you are not surprised.

You read a few pages of old history, a few cable messages from Englishmen of today, and you say: "Happy England, to have had such come always."

You find the spirit of national pride gave India, Egypt, Africa, Canada and Australia to Great Britain.

You rejoice to see those vast empires included in an empire so well governed.

You say to yourself, "I hope that national feeling, at least, to KEEP what we have." For instance, as Mr. Garvin kindly suggests, "Permit me to deal with the outside world without asking the consent of England; permit to keep our Panama Canal a piece of American property, running through American territory, at least as American as the Nile in Egypt."

It is not dislike or mistrust of England that makes Americans wish to keep the uses of today. On the contrary, it is intense admiration for what the statement of England have done for their country. We can keep for America, and have for America, not all, but one-third of what the average good Englishman asks and keeps for England, we shall be quite content.

Liebknecht, Leader of Berlin
"Reds," Opposes Peace
With Entente

Paris, Dec. 10.—A state of siege (martial law) has been proclaimed in Berlin as a result of the counter-revolutionary situation, the Zurich correspondent of L'Information reported today. Dr. Karl Liebknecht, leader of the extremists, has issued a proclamation demanding the overthrow of the present German government within fifteen days. "We refuse to sign peace with the entente," Liebknecht declared.

By International News Service.
London, Dec. 10.—In a fit of melancholy William Hohenzollern, former German Emperor, attempted to kill himself at Amsterdam, but was prevented by a member of his staff, who was himself wounded, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen today.

The Exchange Telegraph correspondent quoted the Leipziger Tageblatt, which had stated that the information was secured from "a well-informed source."

Previous cabled notices to the International News Service had said the former Emperor was in bad health and that a specialist was in constant attendance.

William's depression arose not only from the loss of his throne, but from fears that he would be executed and placed on trial.

That the Kaiser had attempted to shoot himself, if the suicide report is true, was made evident by the minor trial, was made evident by the minor trial, was made evident by the minor trial.

CHENEY FACES STOCK THEFT CHARGE

Benjamin P. Cheney, husband of Julia Arthur, the famous actress, and Almond D. F. Adams, his secretary, were arraigned before Judge Murray in police court today, charged with the larceny of 366 shares of Gila Copper Company, valued at $1,775, from Arthur D. Rederquist, a stock broker at No. 59 Congress street.

The alleged larceny, according to the police, took place on December 16, 1917. It was accomplished by the "wash sales" method. It is charged whereby stock is sold in a roundabout way in order to keep the market price up to standard.

Judge Murray ordered the case continued until tomorrow.

17,000 Deaths From Influenza in U. S. Army Camps

By International News Service.
Washington, Dec. 10.—Approximately 17,000 members of the United States army died of influenza in the military stations of this country during the epidemic this year, it was announced today. This number of deaths occurred out of a total of 338,207 cases.

The greatest number of cases of influenza from a single camp was reported from Camp Funston, Kansas, where a total of 12,611 developed during the epidemic. Camp Funston had 2,394 cases of pneumonia and 920 deaths from all causes. The greatest number of deaths during the epidemic was at Camp Grant, Ill., where there were 1,081 deaths. At Camp Devens there were 15,466 cases.

MULLOWNEY IS REPORTED REMOVED

Mystery surrounds the reported removal or suspension of Patrick H. Mullaney, chief of the Food Inspection Division of the city by Health Commissioner Dr. William C. Woodward.

While Acting Mayor Walter L. Collins and attaches of the Mayor's office admit that a communication suggesting either the "removal or suspension" of Dr. Mullaney was handed to the Mayor, they refuse to reveal the contents. Mr. Parker, the Mayor's secretary, says that the Mayor has the matter under advisement.

The most persistent report is that Dr. Woodward had recommended the removal of Dr. Mullaney for being absent without leave.

The health commissioner is in Chicago, and the Mayor is in Virginia. Mullaney is at present in charge of all shipments of government foodstuffs overseas and is stationed at New York.

It was rumored that Mayor Peters granted him a year's leave of absence to do the government work, but that Dr. Woodward didn't want him to go.

Tell of Last German Raid on England

By WILLIAM M. FLYNN.
New York, Dec. 10.—How several men from Boston and other parts of New England manned English anti-aircraft guns and repulsed the final German air raid on England became known when the Empress of Britain docked here at noon today with 2,448 officers and men of the American Expeditionary Force.

Practically all of the New England men were members of air squadrons or construction units which had been stationed in England and few of them had seen any active service.

On board the transport were the 10th, 25th, 20th, 36th and 31st aero squadrons, 19th, 13th, 14th and 17th construction companies; the 10th casual company, 465 sick and wounded, medical detachment of six officers and 125 men and twenty-five naval aviators. Most of the wounded were members of the 27th (New York) and 28th Divisions. There were 22 stretcher cases on board, but none of the wounded were New Englanders.

PUT FOR ARMYMEN TO FLAG.
Lieutenant C. F. Deane of Washington, in command of the 31st aero squadron, construction company, described the last air attack made upon England by the Germans and told the Boston men of his command "lived in driving back the German air men."

"We were stationed at Dover, Eng."

SENATE BEGINS SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

REVENUE BILL FIGHT

Simmons Opens Debate for Majority Report; Hopes Bill Will Be Passed by Feb. 15

By International News Service.
Washington, Dec. 10.—The Senate today attacked the principal business of the present session of Congress—the 1918-19 reconstruction revenue bill.

In the opening of the debate there was little to indicate the bitterness with which it is believed the issue of whether the bill should provide for the taxes of the fiscal year 1919 will be fought before the bill is enacted into law.

Chairman Simmons of the Finance Committee submitted the committee report on the measure and opened the discussion. Three minority reports are to be filed. Senator Pendergast prepared the principal minority report, and individual reports will be filed by Senators Smoot and La Follette.

Senator Simmons vigorously defended the action of the Democratic majority of his committee in inserting in the bill by a strict party vote the tax provisions for 1919.

NATION'S RIGHT TO KNOW

"The country has a right to know how much and in what degree the burden of war taxes can be prudently reduced," he said. "During this period of reconstruction, business—particularly new business—is entitled to go forward without the burden of the 50 per cent. tax on profits in time of peace the existence of an 80 per cent. profit tax would be a positive evil, for the perpetuation or continuance of which no sufficient reason has been or could be given."

In the fiscal year 1919, Senator Simmons said, the income and profits taxes $14,000,000, and $14,000,000 would be brought in from other sources. The following year the income and profits taxes would return $10,000,000 and other taxes $1,000,000.

Republican members of the committee polioed the measure, there would be no dissenting against the bill in an effort to hold it over for revision after March 4, when the Republicans come into power. However, they were disposed to give full consideration to every paragraph.

This policy if pursued would have the effect of a filibuster.

WILL BRING TO DELAY

Senator Simmons believes the revenue bill can be passed by February 15, but there are few on the Republican side who agree with him. He took steps today to limit debate as far as possible by giving notice that he will not permit the Senate to vote on the bill until after the break in any time with prepared speeches, but he believed the policy of going ahead with the business on hand—a new policy inasmuch as the consideration of revenue bills is considered—will shut off many irrelevant digressions in the Senate.

Fresh-Fruit Desserts

Of the Finest Fruits—At Trifling Cost With a Wealth of Fruit-Juice Essence

Note the fruity delights which Jiffy-Jell puts at your instant call. And now, when you need fruit, and fruit is so costly.

Each package of Jiffy-Jell contains the flavor in liquid form, in a vial. Each fruit flavor is an essence, condensed from the juice of the fruit.

The flavors are abundant. We use half a ripe Pineapple to make one vial of flavor. We use 65 Loganberries to make another—all for one dessert.

All the fragrance and flavor, and the healthfulness of the fresh, ripe fruit are concentrated in this vial. And, sealed in glass, the essence keeps its freshness. So Jiffy-Jell desserts and salads taste like fresh-fruit dainties.

Rare-grade gelatine, ready-sweetened and prepared, comes in the package with the flavor. You simply add boiling water, then the flavor from the bottle, and pour in molds to cool.

It's a Revelation

Jiffy-Jell differs vastly from the old-style gelatine desserts. Their flavors come in dry form, mixed with the gelatine.

True-fruit flavors cannot keep in that way. The finest flavors are impossible.

In Jiffy-Jell you get a fruit-juice essence sealed in glass. You get a wealth of the fresh-fruit flavor. You get the fresh-fruit healthfulness. It is like using the fruit itself.

This is the new-day gelatine dainty. It has brought to millions already a new idea of gelatine desserts. Now we urge you to enjoy it.

Also for Salads, Etc.

Lime-fruit flavor makes a tart, green salad jelly. Serve it with your salad or mix the salad in before cooling. Use cooked or uncooked vegetables—left-overs will do. Or mix in meat scraps and make a delicious meat loaf—meat in aspic.

Mint flavor makes fresh-mint garnish jelly for serving with cold meats or roast lamb.

Any fruit flavor makes delightful salad. We want you to know these dainties—now when you need them most. So we make these mold offers to induce a prompt trial. Try Loganberry or Pineapple as a dessert, also try Lime or Mint. Try two of these flavors—for your own sake—in this week, and you are entitled to any of these gifts.

SPEAKER CLARK WARNS OF WAR FOR TRADE

Urges Development of South American Markets in Baltimore Speech

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

Washington, Dec. 10.—Chas. Clark, speaker of the House of Representatives, sounded at the great Baltimore Commercial Congress, a ringing call to arms for the international trade war, which he declared to be already under way. The speaker's eloquent answer to the raging uncertainty and hesitations of the timid in our country and a frank, but entirely friendly admonition to critics and revilers among our Allies that the United States was fully resolved to develop a magnificent and unopposed merchant market and a great navy in keeping with it and equal to any other navy, with it and equal to any other navy, "great and splendidly prepared" for it, even within the sound of the foot of the great gun.

At another point in his address Speaker Clark declared that the one problem which most concerns the Southern Commercial Congress at this time is the freedom of the seas.

FOUGHT FOR FREEDOM OF SEAS.
"When it is a hand, for the freedom of the seas we fought the most powerful action on earth. Last year and this we fought the Central Powers for the freedom of the seas, for after all it is said and done, that is the chief means by which we participated in the war."

He then depended upon President Wilson to secure the freedom of the seas at the coming Versailles, for that connection the principal question should be to how to increase our foreign trade, for upon that rate in large measure, the future prosperity of this republic.

It is removed that Germany will be shut out from the raw materials markets. Whether that be true, I do not know, but that rumor certainly recedes in the public press. Before the war, Great Britain was our best customer and Germany second. Most of our productions which also took were raw materials or materials only partly manufactured.

NEED NEW FIELDS.
"So, if the rumor referred to turns out to be the truth, we will have lost foreign trade that when the war began and somehow, somewhere, we must find new and untapped fields for our products of farms, factories, forests and mines."

"When I met these new and larger fields he found? He said that our best hunting grounds for trade will be Central and South America, right at our doors. If we had sent the part of wisdom in the last half century, instead of having only 15 per cent of the foreign trade of Latin America, we would have the lion's share. These untapped rich countries are our neighbors and friends. They now contain about 150,000,000 of population and climatic resources that are growing by leaps and bounds."

How are we to increase our trade with that marvellously rich land? By establishing abundant steamship lines between their ports and ours, by establishing better banking facilities, which fit in with their business habits, by packing our goods and services in better and more attractive ways, by having a course of lectures in all of our universities, colleges and business schools, so that our merchants and traveling men can read, write and speak the language of their customers and clients—for it should be remembered that all Central and South America, except Brazil, speak Spanish, and Brazil speaks Portuguese, which is closely akin to Spanish. That would help immensely."

A DISTINGUISHED GATHERING.

The recent Congress is the greatest in the history of the South's representative assembly. It has gathered perhaps the largest and most distinguished body of men Baltimore has known.

Vice-President Marshall will be there tonight. Twenty-two Southern and Central Government are in attendance. In the number of the twenty-five representative cities are here. The halls and lobbies are swarming with the greatest men in commercial, agricultural, political and scientific life of the South.

The whole congress is looking expectantly to the visit today of Mayor Hylan of New York and Mayor Haddock of Boston. Mayor Hylan, one time, felt bound to cancel his acceptance of a place on the program, but so certain is the feeling of the Southern people toward New York's Mayor that the representative men of Congress rose in such protest that Mayor Hylan is coming to speak tomorrow before the big congress of American Mayors and to receive a great welcome.

Mayor Hylan and Mr. Hylan breakfasted with Mayor Preston at the Maryland Club.

THREE QUINCY SOLDIERS RETURN TO THEIR HOMES

Three Quincy boys, receiving honorable discharges from training camps in this country, have returned to their homes, and received a warm welcome. Two sons of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Powers of No. 43 Bigelow street returned to Quincy on the same train. The younger brother, Lieutenant Leo V. Powers, U. S. Field Artillery, enlisted in May of last year in the 21st U. S. Ambulance Company, and was stationed at Panama before being assigned to the officers' training school at Camp Taylor, Ky. His brother, Private J. J. Powers, was honorably discharged from Camp Upton, N. Y.

Lieutenant William E. Howe, Jr., of No. 15 Bigelow street, returned from Camp Taylor, Ky., where he has been an instructor.

PARS ANALYZED ATTACK ON WILSON

By NABOTH MEDIN.

Copyright, 1918, by Universal Service, Paris, Dec. 10.—Publication here of a two-column columnar interview with Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, alleging that President Wilson, caused profound amusement.

It is the longest cable dispatch printed in the French press since the outbreak of the war.

Julien Bord, writing in Saturday's Quotidien, says:

"The French consular, as general, one today, his own more surprising article presenting President Wilson's policies as contrary to American sentiment."

"The next step would be to say that his policies are disagreeable to us."

The writer adds that the French disagree with President Wilson only on two points:

1—Freedom of the seas.

2—Military control of the left bank of the Rhine.

President Wilson will receive on his arrival both in Great Britain and the greatest welcome from the French Republic, who regard the American executive the most friendly champion of their ideas since the statement of the associated powers.

The reception at Brest is being organized by the Socialist Mayor of that city, aided by a Socialist member of the Chamber of Deputies. The Socialist party as such will send a delegation of deputies to greet the President on his landing at Brest.

NOTABLE RECEPTION.

Here in Paris the Socialist Labor organization is taking special charge of a magnificent reception, making also special mention of its own for maintaining order and making order.

President's stay memorable. The workers are planning a double holiday. A monster indoor meeting in Mr. Wilson's honor will be held in the largest Parisian hall available, perhaps the Trocadero.

"The Socialist intend to kidnap Wilson," writes the royalist organ, Le Petit Parisien, which, filled out and stirred together, will form a gigantic welcome to the American Chief.

Littonian, official organ of the Socialist party, is preparing a special "Wilson number," with contributions from leading radical writers, including Anatole France.

PLAN POPULAR GIFT.

This morning France Libre, the new Nationalist Socialist organ, was having its city plastered with posters asking one cent contributions from the common people to present President Wilson with an artistic souvenir with which to greet the peace negotiator.

It may be stated that these huge preparations are not entirely devoid of political motives in addition to the deep-rooted gratitude toward Wilson, the man, and the country he represents.

The general sentiment of the Socialists and the Radicals, indeed, of the masses of France, is that Woodrow Wilson is the strongest champion of a new order in the world based on justice. The desire for a just, humane and durable peace, the wish to reduce the colossal military expense, and the opposition to the imperialist sentiment which it is felt will only cause new wars, are added motives behind the Socialist action of the American Chief Executive.

Probably the best definition of the Socialist attitude toward Mr. Wilson is contained in a letter from Romain Rolland, the eminent French author, who has been in voluntary exile in Switzerland since early in the war, addressed to Jean Longuet, the Socialist leader.

"Despite our reservation for the future," writes Mr. Rolland, "I believe we should now give our most effective support to Wilson's action, which alone is capable of imposing a check upon the appetites and ambitions and violent instincts that will participate in the peace banquet."

"Such support is the only chance to establish now a modus vivendi, relatively fair throughout Europe, for this great bourgeois incarnates the largest, most disinterested, and most humane conscience of his class, and none is more worthy of being architect."

"They Are Putting New Life in Me"

Mr. W. H. Pennington, Wharton, Maine Tablet, writes that he is putting new life in me. I had a bad case of my grip the last winter, and my physician's prescription did me no good. I saw that Cadouene was recommended for cases like mine, and I sent twenty miles to get them. Now, after using only one week, I am gaining strength, eating with a relish and sleeping like a baby."

etc. Any nervous, weak, impoverished man or woman can take Cadouene with certainty of helping them back to strength and vigor. Every purchase guaranteed satisfactory in the purchase. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

Last Month of the Great Patriotic Song Contest

This is the last month of the patriotic song contest being conducted by the Hearst newspapers throughout the country. No manuscript will be considered which is mailed after midnight, December 31.

Five thousand dollars in prizes is offered for the best patriotic songs written by our readers. The first prize is $2,000; second, $1,000; third, $500; fourth, $300; fifth, $200, and ten prizes of $100 each.

Thousands of manuscripts have already been received from known and unknown authors. Everybody is invited to participate in the contest. The subject is to get songs that will express the patriotic sentiment of the nation and stir the pulse of posterity.

The rules of the contest follow:

Songs will be judged by a national committee of famous song writers and composers.

Fifteen will be selected, which will be published in the Hearst papers. From this number our readers will be asked to select the prize winners by popular vote.

All copyright and other privileges are to belong to the authors, the Hearst papers reserving the right of first publication.

All songs must be complete in words and music.

No song will be considered which has been published or sung prior to submission in the contest.

Marches, hymns, anthems, ballads and religious songs will be considered, as long as they express the patriotic spirit of the time.

Address contributions to Song Editor, Boston American, and watch its columns for news of the contest. No entry blank or fee is required.

The Hearst papers have no association with any musical society or song promotion institutions offering to revise, or soliciting, manuscripts in this contest.

POLICE HUNTING WOMAN IN DE OF 'HEALER'

Pawtucket, R. I., Dec. 10.—The police are investigating the activities of Albert H. Plante, 101 North Main street, sentenced to six months in prison on a charge of obtaining money from women for treatment, and are looking for a woman confederate to have aided him in his work.

Plante is a native of Pawtucket, and among his patients were women who have been known to give him such large sums of money for the "treatment" given by the "healer," aided, the police believe, by a woman.

BABY BLAINE IS STOCKS SHAKY KEPT AWAY IN INCUBATOR AFTER EARLY STRENGTH

Chicago, Dec. 10.—Housed in an incubator and watched day and night to guard the sacred spark of life, a baby girl, four weeks old, and the great-granddaughter of James G. Blaine and Cyrus H. McCormick, is spending her first day in the world outside of a hospital room.

She is at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Blaine, where she was taken, in an ambulance. The ambulance had first been driven about the streets of Chicago for four days so that its temperature might be exactly regulated.

Baby Blaine is the daughter of Eleanor Blaine, wife of the late Senator from Ohio, who died last night of pneumonia, and of Eleanor McCormick, who was the young Har- vard engineer married a year ago in Portsmouth, N. H.

The New York stock market was irregular in the second hour after early strength today.

Prof. Hart's Work During War the Best Answer to the Insinuation of Pro-Germanism

Nothing better illustrates the injustice of the method adopted by the Senate committee investigating the pro-German activities of Americans than the publication of the name of Professor Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard as one of the men considered "pro-German."

Of course nobody in Massachusetts who knows Professor Hart personally, or by reputation, would for a moment believe that he was pro-German even if the evidence were plausible. But his name is mentioned in a connection which indicates not the slightest evidence of pro-Germanism that could be accepted by any intelligent or thoughtful man.

The damage, however, done by mentioning his name at all in this connection is that a large part of the community does not examine the weight and nature of evidence, but takes its news predigested by the headlines and by the general atmosphere created by the writer of the newspaper article.

No one has worked harder for the cause of the allies than Professor Hart. Those who know him know that he is more than ordinarily an enthusiastic American. He gave, without stint, a very great deal of his time, probably all the time that was not occupied by his professional work, to the promotion of a sound public sentiment in favor of the war and all the objects for which the war was being fought.

His connection with work of the National Security League, especially with that phase of the league's activity which was above reproach, was so well known among the intelligent portions of the community that he should not feel disturbed about the recent disclosure in Washington relative to the league.

Those citizens who never think independently and who take their slant from a headline, or from the atmosphere of the article, rather than from the facts and their credibility, will have forgotten the incident in a day.

In the meantime the American people ought to be wary of this cry of pro-Germanism and Bolshevism. It is used pretty generally now to draw "red herring" across most trail which somebody wants to conceal. It is like the cry of stop thief.

The New Republic pointed out the other day that whenever a predatory group in the last few months have wanted to oppose some necessary reform which trespassed upon some of their privileges, they cried "Bolshevism" or "Socialism" against it.

So the cry of "pro-Germanism" is often used by people who have ulterior motives and who dare not stand upon the real ground of their opposition.

The cry of "Bolshevism," "Socialism" and "pro-Germanism" is getting to be rather a transparent camouflage nowadays.

Public Should Take Over the Portland Steamship Co.

Let us hope that Boston will make an active effort to restore the steamship line between Boston and Portland, the largest city in Maine. This line was abandoned because the government, under war necessity, had taken away all but one ship, and that one ship could not in the winter season meet the overhead expenses of running the line.

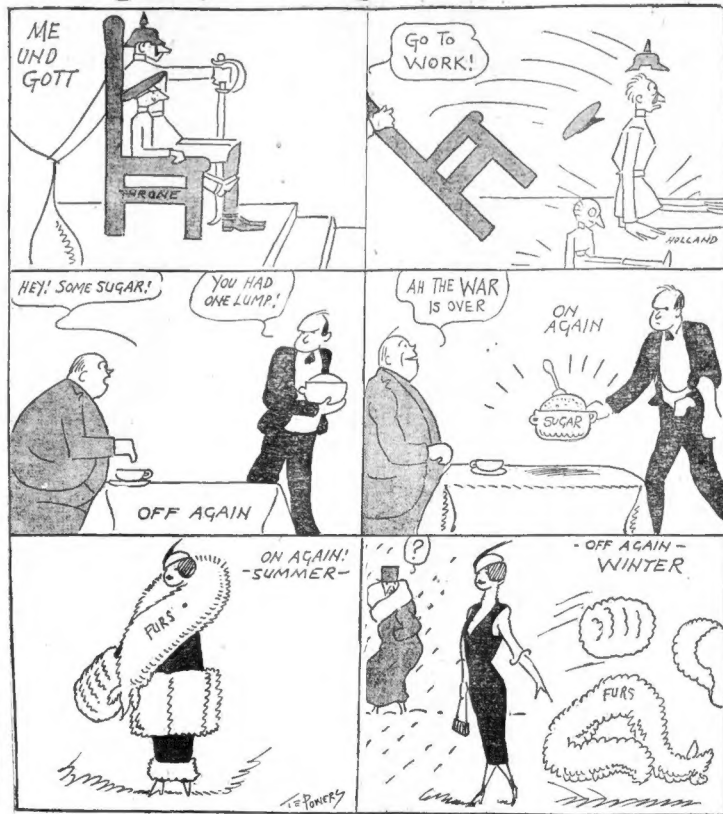

But the war is over, and Boston must see to it that it quickly recovers from its losses on account of the war. This line has been running between Boston and Portland for more than seventy years, and except in one disastrous instance which, under present-day conditions, could never happen again, it has provided a safe, enjoyable and economical ally to our interstate transportation service far too valuable to be given up.

New England's place in the future commerce of the world will largely depend upon the activity and vision with which she now proceeds to the work of reconstruction. It is a noteworthy fact that London has already begun to build the greatest dock systems of the world, the city having appropriated more than two hundred millions for this purpose. Boston cannot even visualize a sum like that, and no such stupendous outlay is necessary, but the "penny-wise and pound-foolish" method of running our public affairs which has prevailed so far will leave us in fifty years in a hopeless eddy, while the other communities rush by in the middle of the stream of progress which an able and more vigorous guidance has enabled them to keep.

We have here one more illustration of the folly of committing our public utilities, and especially our vitally important transportation service, to private ownership and control. The managers of the steamship corporation naturally and inevitably have looked first to the earning of dividends, with only such regard to the interests and wishes of the public as in their judgment is likely to attract immediate and paying traffic to the line. Under public ownership and management the interests of the public would be the first consideration, and its managers would no sooner think of interrupting a transportation service so valuable to the public because for the moment its revenue was too small than the postal department would consider suspending rural free delivery in stormy weather or when the letters and parcels to be delivered were so few that their postage would not cover the expense.

Public operation of the Portland line would be a boon to its present shareholders, and a still greater boon to the Boston interests and to travelling public. This is an issue that the Chamber of Commerce would do well to take up at once.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Greeks in Turkey

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Will you allow me to correct, through the columns of your esteemed paper, a few misleading statements regarding the number and importance of the enslaved Greeks in Turkey, which have been circulated throughout the country by misinformed persons and which appeared even in your own columns only a few weeks ago in the form of statistics for the population of Asia Minor, the result being that they help only to create unnecessary ethnological complications, and thus make the work of the peace conference harder? For it is an established fact that the Greek element in western Asia Minor, a compact body covering broadly the two vilayets of Smyrna and Bursa, and not mentioning the numerous Greek colonies scattered in the interior of Anatolia, is a living organism and as such it demands its rights to be recognized and its national aspirations fulfilled.

Official statistics of the Turkish government in 1913 put the Greeks of Asia Minor alone at 2,500,000 souls and that of Thrace at Constantinople to 800,000, a fact which is rendered the more reliable just because it is taken from that source.

Turkish Census

In Constantinople there were, according to the same census, not less than 263 Greek schools, 940 teachers and 25,900 pupils. In Thrace there were 650 Greek schools, 925 teachers and 45,900 students.

In Asia Minor there were not less than 2,500 Greek schools, 5,143 teachers and 207,000 students.

The proportion to the Turkish schools and students stands in Thrace 5 to 1 and in the prefectures of Smyrna and Bursa, western Asia Minor 3 to 1 in favor of the Greeks.

Dr. Harry Stuermer, late correspondent of the Kölnische Zeitung from Constantinople, in his book "Two Years in Constantinople" (1915-16), estimates the Greeks in Turkey to four millions and a half, and reminds us that western Asia Minor and Thrace are strictly Hellenic.

That the Greeks far exceed in education, commerce and agriculture all the other races of the Ottoman empire is admitted by all impartial observers who happened to visit Asia Minor at different periods.

The educational spirit of the Greeks was the object of admiration of Ch. de Scherzer, once consul of Austria in Smyrna. "No other race," says M. E. Reclus, an eminent geographer who traveled Asia Minor in 1885, "knows how to secure the future of its children by education as the Greeks. In every city there are schools. Education even in the hinterland is at its best."

Greek Deportations

Unfortunately, the Greeks in Asia Minor were not free from persecutions and other infamous machinations by which the Turkish government hoped to Turkify the Ottoman empire. Sporadic deportations of the Greeks all along the littoral of western Asia Minor took place as early as May and June of 1914, and assumed a general and systematic character as soon as the war broke out. It seems that Germany was involved in it, for, to quote Mr. Morgenthau, formerly U. S. Ambassador to Turkey, "Since Germany had her own plans in Asia Minor inevitably the Greeks at this region (western Asia Minor) formed a barrier to Pan-German aspirations. As long as this region remained Greek it formed a natural obstacle to Germany's road to the Persian Gulf."

Up to the end of 1917 more than 200,000 Greeks of military age were forcibly inducted into the Turkish army. A million and a half Greeks were deported in all, two-thirds of which were driven to the interior of Anatolia, where most of them died of hunger, exposure and disease.

The property seized by the Turkish government amounts to not less than five billion francs. Mr. Morgenthau estimates the number of the Greeks deported to the interior of Asia Minor to be between 200,000 and a million souls, and he expresses the hope which every friend of democracy should share, that the Greeks, after suffering five centuries the most unpeppable outrages in the hands of the Turks, should look longingly for the day when their territory should be part of the reunited Hellenic empire.

Just a Wooden Cross

By Win Brooks

JUST a cross of wood in the breaking dawn,
'Neath the crimson flush of the early morn;
When the sun leaps high with its Christ'ning ray,
At the remembrance of another day—
Just a wooden cross in the still of night,
'Neath the silver haze of the starry light;
When a moon hangs low in the curtained sky,
And the night winds speak with a tender sigh.

Like a cross of gold in the morning bright,
Like a silver form in the starry night;
Just a wooden cross in the crimson sod,
Just a cross of wood—but a Cross of God!

GOODBY, MR. GLOOM; COME IN, MISS JOY

How about it—are you allowing that groggy feeling in the morning to get a stronger hold on you every year?

Feel pretty good when you wake up, mind and body rested. No reason in the world why you should not be good natured. But the habit of being groggy has become so much a part of you that you greet your family at the morning meal with a frown as black as after dinner coffee, and you are not satisfied till you have found something to complain about.

Get a better grip on yourself. Surprise mother and the kiddies once in a while with a smile and a pleasant word to show that you appreciate the wafted or whatever is good for breakfast.

Surely at home, you are early at the office or shop, and grant a response to those who offer a friendly "good morning," while if you are at the head of a department, you cast a gleam over the entire force, not conducive to activity or good work, either.

To say nothing of those you left behind who must drag through the day's drudgery, realizing a weight which would not be there if it were not for your eternal "gloom."

ONE TYPE OF WIFE WHO UNMAKES LIVES

By Winifred Black

THE man's a good man and his wife was a good woman—until the mother-in-law stepped in to the picture.

And now the man's wife is never at home, the children are neglected and the husband comes from work to find no dinner and no wife. The lady gets along as best it can in the care of the mother-in-law, who doesn't appear to care much for it, and some time along about midnight or one or two in the morning the man's wife gets home.

When he asks her where she has been, she tells him to mind his own affairs.

There is a sister, too, who is happily married, but now the mother-in-law has encouraged her to neglect her home, and the two poor, wretched, weak, vain women are throwing their lives away and disgracing themselves and their husbands, all on account of the evil influence of mother-in-law.

Husband has written and told me about it, and he wants to know what he ought to do.

Poor husband! What do you think you can do with a woman like that?

Or three women like that—to be quite exact.

If what you say is true, they are entirely out of place in any man's decent home. If I were you, I would have one of them under the same roof with my child for one hour—not if I had to put them out into the street, myself and risk up the patrol wagon to come and take them away.

Six Months Will Cure

Why don't you take your child and go to some other town, Mr. Man?

Why don't you just pack up your things one of these fine, lonesome evenings and disappear—with your children?

Go somewhere and advertise for a place to board, where some one will look after your child.

There are hundreds and thousands of good, respectable, sensible women who would like to make a home for you and for your child.

They may be married and have perfectly good husbands of their own and take this means of adding a little to the family income, or they may be widows who keep boarders, or who have families of their own to bring up, and will be glad to give the money you can put into the family treasury in return for what they can do for you.

It won't take you one week of good, plain, common sense to get yourself and your child comfortably settled, and in six months of sane, sensible living, you will have forgotten that you ever thought you were going to break your heart over a worthless woman like that, or spend your energies hating your mother-in-law because she came into your home and turned your wife into something which no right-minded man could tolerate for one moment.

Don't worry any more, don't grieve any more, don't sit alone evenings and look at the photograph you had taken together when you thought she was the only perfect creature God ever sent.

Don't hate—Forget!

Don't read over her old letters, don't sentimentalize, and wail, and wonder, and eat your heart out over a worthless woman.

The world is full of good people, of sane people, of clean-minded, warm-hearted, rightliving people. You belong with them. Find some clean and sane life.

This woman is only a little passing episode in your life. Poor, foolish thing, she will see the day when she will regret what she has done, but you cannot wait for that to come.

Hate your mother-in-law? Nonsense, man! Don't hate her—forget her.

As much of forgetting to worth a thousand pounds of hate any day in 1918.

MYSTERY OF DINNER SET FOR TWO

You've read of the Frank Gould divorce suit, but perhaps you've never heard of the dinner party that started even day Paree. The day when she will regret what she has done, but you cannot wait for that to come.

She imagined that she could afford to be rude and uncaring and unkind. It is an extremely expensive luxury, she made up her mind to indulge in it usually and to her sorrow.

BEAUTY WILL NOT ATONE FOR YOUR FAULTS

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

THIS might be called a letter to a young girl—any young girl.

So I inquire of her: What do you think about yourself? You are, you know, a potentiality—a something that may become anything. That very little remark, the world takes you at your own valuation, is only another way of saying that you show outwardly your own inward vision of yourself. There is also an old Hindu aphorism, that we become the thing we complete.

Then, why not contemplate all charming and gracious and beautiful things? You can see anything you want, you know, in the fraction of a second you can look back to some scene of your childhood; you can view last evening's sunset; you can look at your own vision of yourself as you would like to be. And that vision will in time externalize itself.

It sounds like magic—doesn't it? But it's only a fact, as simple and as true as that two and two make four.

Don't Belittle Yourself!

So I ask: What do you think about yourself, anyway?

You reply: "I don't think much of myself. I am awkward and clumsy, and I'm plain. Oh, I have a lot of faults, and I'm terribly handicapped. If I only had this or that person's charms or abilities, I might do something. But how can I, when everything's against me?"

All negations, you see. Do you think you can hold these opinions of yourself and not convey them to other people?

I went to a motion picture theatre the other evening, and sitting directly in front of me was a very pretty girl and a young soldier. Some pictures of big guns and their operation were being shown upon the screen, and the boy was deeply interested in them. He watched them with the closest attention, and then turned to the girl and began explaining the mechanism of the guns and the way in which they are used.

She listened wearily for a second or two, sighed about in her seat, looked around her, yawned and finally asked: "Oh, stop talking about those old guns. I don't want to hear anything more about them."

He was taken aback. "Sure was a little flash in his eyes and a flicker of chagrin passed over his face. He said nothing at all, however, but absorbed himself for the rest of the evening in the program presented on the screen.

The moment of disillusion took place before my eyes. The little boy had thought was pretty "plain," he discovered to be merely pretty "plain." For say, the girl, the temptuous rhapsodist of her, she had deliberately deprived herself of more than she had deprived him.

Just a Pretty Mask

He had seen, as did every one else who looked at her, an enchanting, pretty mask of flesh. But now she had revealed to him the cheap, common soul behind it. She showed herself ignorant of good manners, of tact, of that instinctive grace and courtesy which every woman who wishes to possess or acquire.

She had said to him as plainly as if she had expressed it in words, "I don't care for anything outside of my tiny sphere of brain activity. My interests are all centered in myself. You are just a man with me, as with me, is to admire and make love to me."

No man wants to make love to a woman all the time. He does have moments of lucidity when he is an intelligent human being—and expects the girl he is with to be one, too.

I am not criticizing girls for flirting or having a good time and enjoying all the admirers who can get. That's youth and human nature. But it was regrettable that this girl thought so meanly of her self. She wasn't just a girl, she was a little Slugg Smith, or Grace Jones, or whatever her name was. She admired her looks on much that she didn't give her mind or her heart or her soul a chance. And no woman can hold a man long on mere looks.

She imagined that she could afford to be rude and uncaring and unkind. It is an extremely expensive luxury, she made up her mind to indulge in it usually and to her sorrow.
